

and curious and worried about the process inside observing the fairness than outside fearing that it is not fair and prepared to take the issue to court. With that in mind I think Senator Beutler's amendments and changes are quite adequate and to go one step further, it is absolutely wrong and I hope you as a Legislature recognize it and defeat the Beutler amendment.

PRESIDENT: Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. Chairman and members of the Legislature, much of what Senator Beutler is saying reminds me much of what he said on a bill I had labeled LB 210 which abolished a discriminatory, a gender discriminatory pension program for various public workers. Now on that bill Senator Beutler used the barracuda approach, slashing, ripping, tearing and he lost. He learns from experience so he knows now that there is another little denizen of the deep whose conduct he can emulate. That is a piranha. You have a multiplicity of tiny little bites that accomplish the same purpose that the barracuda with huge slashing rips will try to do. But whether it comes as a barracuda or a piranha its fishy and fishy things smell fishy. So no matter how the argument is cloaked it is a fishy argument. It is akin to union busting and it sounds much to me like the one offering these kind of propositions could have been an advisor for the national administration when they were dealing with the air traffic controllers union. Some people don't like unions. There is something about it that doesn't seem right when you put it in the context of Americana but if you put it in the context of Poland and the union being opposed to what they call communist aggression then unions are sanctified. The leader of such a union should get a Nobel Prize and is applauded by Americans who at the same time are in favor of busting unions in this country. They feel that the workers ought to be just that, workers. You educate the leaders of society to make decisions. You train the workers to be there to do the hard, difficult tasks. The others need to have leisure time so that their children can go to Yale or Harvard or some other school out east which carries a lot of prestige so that in you are number nothing in that school's graduating class it is better than
